More OFWs back as Libya operations wind down

By Jerry E. Esplanada

ANOTHER 312 overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) fleeing the fighting in Libya were scheduled to land in Manila yesterday, according to the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (Naia) media affairs office.

The returning workers were on the manifests of six commercial flights from the Middle East and one from Hong Kong.

As of 5:30 p.m., 170 OFWs had arrived at Naia, adding to the 8,150 Filipinos who had returned from Libya on board 126 flights since March 12. They took the connecting flights from the Middle East. Two flights from Bahrain, one from Doha, Qatar; one from Kuwait, and one from Abu Dhabi, Naia officials said.

On Friday, the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said more than 14,000 Filipino workers had exited Libya and were "already out of harm's way."

Foreign Undersecretary Rafael Seguis told reporters that DFA field personnel and their counterparts from the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) were "already on mop-up operations" in the conflict-ridden country.

Seguis said, "As the number of people who are crossing Libya's borders and arriving at the exit points have significantly decreased, the joint DFA-DOLE teams stationed around Libya are winding down their operations."

He added, "More and more Filipinos will be arriving in the next days, including those in the chartered Philippine Airlines flights which are bringing home the passengers aboard the government chartered Greek ferry MV Ionian Queen."

Some members of the DFA-DOLE teams were also expected to return to Manila "in a few days," he said.

The Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (Owwa) said it had released more than P79.4 million in financial assistance to over 7,000 repatriates from Feb. 26 to March 12.

During the period, Owwa said, it also provided temporary shelter to 772 OFWs and counseling services to 2,137 others.

Owwa Administrator Carmelita Dimzon clarified that the OFW "reintegration" or the P10,000 relief assistance shall be limited to those who lost their employment (in Libya) and were repatriated to the Philippines due to the political conflict (in the north African country)."

Dimzon also said that OFWs "who went back to the Philippines prior to the voluntary repatriation program announced by the DFA on Feb. 26 are considered not repatriated due to conflict and are not entitled to receive the P10,000 grant."

Puzakals lose to French team

"Yesterday's competition was divided into three 20-minute matches, with the first and last games having teams from both the Bilibid and French sides all mixed up.

The second game featured the showdown between the much taller team composed of French expatriates and the newly formed squad from the New Bilibid Prisons (NBP) medium security facility serving sentences not exceeding 20 years.

The man

[illegible] Marcos fought off scoring chances for the prisoners, presenting a rival with as seven. The French side named Marcos as the man of the match, giving him the ball as a prize.

Team members conceded that the Puzakals have a long way to go.

"With this game, we want to pursue our passion for the sport together. We want this to go on," Greg Ardon said. "We have to develop our stamina because skills are useless if we don't have stamina."

Ardon agrees with Bruno that football could showcase that inmates like him can shape up. "Everyone makes mistakes, that's why we're here to do time for it," Ardon said.

"The game is not just only to entertain our guests, but also for other inmates. We want to show every one that our time inside has been fruitful for us," Vicente Flores echoed.

More exposure

As they came down to the NBP's sunken garden, the faces of the Puzakal team members lit up as excitement seeing spectators mostly composed of French team's kin wearing shirts supporting the inmates.

Bruno Vergnes, a member of the French Football Club, refereed the first two matches before donning their team jersey and playing the last game.

"[The Puzakals] need more exposure," he said. "They need to keep on playing against other teams and learn more how to play together. Otherwise, they are doing great."

Vergnes and the French team donated four ball uniforms and balls for the Puzakals in the closing ceremony, telling their Filipino counterparts to continue working on their game.

Nicolas Hardex downplayed the French's height advantage, explaining that in football, height was not much of a factor. The Filipinos must master how to play as a unit, he said, and work on strategies.

"We got a lot of experience from this match. We should continue training," said Ido Castañeda who scored the Puzakals' first goal.

The game, he said, was a dream fulfilled since he had been urging Bruno to introduce football in the NBP.

Rehab program

Bruno said he hoped the event would spur more interest among corrections administrators as vital part of the prison rehabilitation program.

Assistant Solicitor General Karl Miranda made of the games' success to the private sector's efforts. "It is what they call in, rebuilding" inmates to reintegrate back to society.

Rudy del Rosario, who organized the Philippine team in the Homeless World Cup, offered to push football system for NBP inmates.

"We can put up a league within Bilibid," he said. "Perhaps call it Bilibid Premier League?"

It certainly could work wonders.

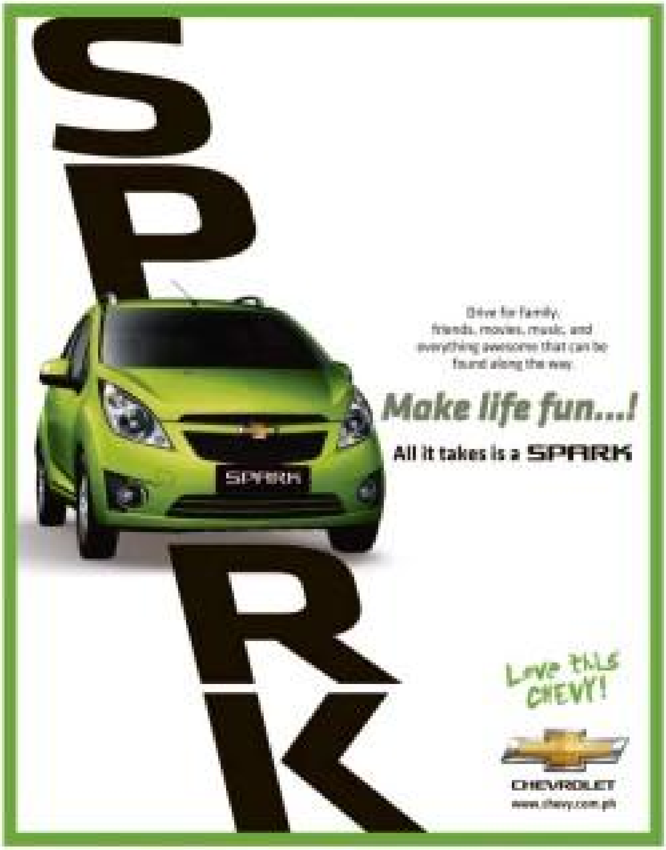

MEMBERS of the Bilibid Puzakals see action against a local French team in a friendly football match.

Cops to attend ransom money probe

By Jeannette I. Andrade

TWO of the six Manila policemen who are under investigation for the alleged disappearance of millions of pesos worth of ransom recovered from a group of kidnappers have promised to cooperate with investigators.

Senior Supt. Fidel Posadas, deputy director for operations of the Manila Police District (MPD) and head of the team tasked to look into the matter, told the Inquirer yesterday that the policemen's decision not to submit themselves to an ongoing probe was based on a lawyer's advice.

Two of the policemen, however, have realized that their decision was wrong. As a result, they have decided to present themselves today to the MPD General Assignment Section (GAS) which is conducting an inquiry.

On Friday, the MPD, upon the orders of Mayor Alfredo Lim, started looking into the alleged disappearance of around P12 million worth of ransom recovered from a gang which had kidnapped a Malaysian trader.

According to the kidnap victim, he paid P16 million to his captors led by Marlon Lopera.

During Lopera's arrest, a team composed of MPD Station 5 commander, Supt. Felipe [illegible] Jr., Senior Insp. [illegible], PO3 [illegible], PO3 Jefferson [illegible], PO3 [illegible] and PO1 [illegible] reported that they recovered only P4.2 million of the ransom.

Lopera, however, claimed that the P16 million was intact when the policemen took him into custody.

During Friday's investigation, the policemen under probe—with the exception of [illegible]—walked out of the proceedings.

They also failed to show up the following day for the continuation of the investigation, prompting MPD director Chief Supt. Roberto Rongavilla to order all MPD units to look for the five and "hold them for investigation."

Posadas said that one of the policemen had hired a lawyer who advised them not to attend the inquiry.

"They did not need a lawyer yet. This was

Japan runs risk of fiscal crisis

Economic aftershocks could affect world economy

LONDON—The massive Japanese earthquake has raised the chances of a fiscal crisis in the world's third largest economy and could affect countries around the globe, analysts in Europe and the US said Friday.

"It may be several days before the costs of the disaster are clearer," British consultancy Capital Economics warned in a study, a view echoed by counterparts elsewhere.

"The greater the social and economic damage, the larger the threat to the government's ability and willingness to ward off a fiscal crisis," added the report written by economists Julian Jessop and David Rea.

ING economists underscored the fragile state of Tokyo's finances, while Carl Weinberg at High Frequency Economics in the United States said: "This is a sad day for Japan, and economic aftershocks could affect the whole world's economy."

Counterparts at the Japanese bank Mizuho were less alarmed, noting that the huge Japanese quake that hit Kobe in 1995 had not seriously harmed the economy in the medium term.

More than 1,000 people probably died in the massive 8.9-magnitude earthquake that hit Japan on Friday, unleashing huge tsunamis along its Pacific coast, Kyodo News agency said.

"The impact on local people is of course foremost in everyone's minds," Capital Economics noted. "But the financial markets also need to consider the economic costs and the implications of the disaster for the public finances. These could be considerable."

Japan is burdened by the industrialized world's biggest debt, which runs close to 200 percent of gross domestic product (GDP).

The area hit hardest hosts industrial zones with chemical and electronics plants, an area that accounts for about 1.7 percent of Japan's total output," Nomura chief European economist Peter Westaway said.

"The impact on overall activity is not going to be that great," he estimated but it "might then have a knock-on effect on confidence in the JGB (Japanese government bond) market."

Nomura senior economist Takuma Ikeda stressed that in 1995, the economy bounced back within two quarters, but the latest earthquake could not have been timed much worse for Japan, according to Capital Economics.

The Japanese economy shrank by 1.3 percent in the three months to December, compared to a year earlier, official data had showed on Thursday. That was worse than the initial estimate of 1.1 percent.

"A large part of the reconstruction costs will probably have to be met by local authorities and ultimately by central government, which is already struggling to bring public debt under control," added the consultancy. AFP

GOLDEN ABC, the pioneering fashion retail company behind such brands as Penshoppe, Oxygen, ForMe, Memo, Regatta, and the direct selling subsidiary Red Logo, celebrated its landmark 25th anniversary with a huge homecoming that brought over 500 of its employees from all over the country to the luxe Mactan Island Shangri-la resort.

Prior to the homecoming, the sales team of GOLDEN ABC attended a 2-day National Sales Conference at the beautiful Maribago Bluewater Beach Resort also in Mactan.

"GOLDEN ABC started out as a small business here in Cebu, 25 years ago. So for this historic point in our company history, it was only fitting that we bring everyone home to where it all began," says Bernie Liu, CEO of GOLDEN ABC. "It's a good opportunity to look back at our achievements, to celebrate where we now are, and to get excited about the company's future."

GOLDEN ABC, Inc. was founded in Cebu in 1986 as a small retail and manufacturing business. By constantly introducing product innovations and maintaining a high level of professionalism in its operations, the company has grown to become a market leader in the Philippine fashion industry. The company set-up a Manila office in 1987 to support the growing business, and has just broken ground on a 12-storey building in the same compound in Quezon City, which will be finished in 2012.

"We've been blessed with much success, and a lot of it is due to teamwork, leadership, dynamic talents and our culture of prayer within the GOLDEN ABC community," says Liu. Ted Bebas, VP for Human Capital and Corporate Spokesperson added, "We wanted to reward everyone in the GOLDEN ABC family with an unforgettable trip that we can take together. After all, our continued success rests on their efforts."

No less than a 3-day, 2-night stay at the Mactan Island Shangri-la was the reward for GOLDEN ABC's employees, which began with a thanksgiving Mass celebration officiated by His Eminence Ricardo Cardinal Vidal.

A fellowship night, which was held at the chic, brand new events place, the Oakridge Pavilion, saw guests and GOLDEN ABC employees enjoying a fun filled and exciting evening. The Oakridge Pavilion was a fitting venue for the fellowship night, since it is situated in the very compound where GOLDEN ABC's corporate headquarters is located, and where the company began 25 years ago.

During the anniversary celebrations, the company recognized its standout employees at the GREAT Awards ceremonies (which stands for GOLDEN ABC's Recognition of Employees' Achievements and Triumphs) and the first-ever Founders Awards, hosted by Lyn Ching Pascual, Akihiro Sato, Solenn Heussaff, and Paolo Bediones. The GREAT Awards, held yearly, honors those who exemplify the company's values of integrity, spirit of enterprise, professionalism, and service along with outstanding business performance. This year, 37 GREAT Awardees were chosen from a pool of exemplary performers that were nominated by their own colleagues who have recognized their contribution to the company. Apart from the recognition, the winners of the GREAT Awards will be treated to an all-expense paid vacation to an Asian destination. The Founders Awards, which will be given out every three years, recognizes former GREAT awardees who have continued to uphold the company's values and do excellent work. For the first ever Founders Awards, 12 honorees were chosen and the winners will celebrate together when they take a week-long company-sponsored vacation to Rome, Italy.

GOLDEN ABC's 25th anniversary celebration is testament to the company's strong efforts to fulfil its vision of becoming the most admired Asian fashion brands company. Through the mix of dynamic talents and operational excellence with responsible citizenship and a winning culture, GOLDEN ABC has successfully developed and created some of the most popular, leading brands in the country.

"I'd been dreaming of this moment since we began the company 25 years ago," continues Liu. "And I believe that God has brought us here because we, as a company, have held true to our values, no matter how tough the times have been. It's what distinguishes us today, and it's what is going to help us make a mark in the international fashion industry in the next 25."

Text and photos by Walter Ang
Contributor

THE IDEA of "access to education" inspired "The Green Light Project," a fund-raising photo exhibit featuring 40 works by 10 photographers.

Organized by De La Salle University, the exhibit aims to raise funds for One La Salle Scholarship Fund.

"The fund is the centerpiece project of our centennial celebrations to be held in 2011," said Brother Bernard Oca, university vice chancellor for external relations.

"The scholarship fund aims to raise P1 billion to support approximately 10,000 students on full scholarship in the 17 La Salle schools in the country across all levels and courses."

Set to tour the country, the exhibit was launched at The Gallery, Greenbelt 5. The exhibit was endorsed beside the Swatch store for one month.

Also launched was the DLSU Centennial chronograph by Swatch. The chronograph is part of a limited four design commemorative wristwatch collection.

The chronograph comes with a book titled "11: Time for Hope," containing stories of 11 scholars "who are now reaping the benefits of their Lasallian education, and sharing the love of themselves in their respective fields."

Green heritage

All the exhibited photographers are alumni of La Salle schools here and abroad.

"The collection is very varied. The photographers were given the liberty to define their views on what it means to be a 'green,' what it means to be a Lasallian," Oca said.

Celebrity photographer, fine art and commercial photographer Francis Ricaro defined green as "go" by featuring images taken during travels and by revisiting the unique areas of La Salle architecture.

Conceptual portraitist Nicole Castro and sports photographer Vic Isaac depict modern interpretations of famous religious images and glory moments of the DLSU men's basketball team, respectively.

US-based photo hobbyist Sid Gabaldon Campos and wedding photographer John Michael Ong capture nature and greenscapes.

Underwater photographer Perry Aragon and Photoshop master Jun Miranda interpret green through the dynamics of light and space.

Child photographer Louie Aguinaldo and celebrity photographer Ronnie Salvacion capture the essence of a growing network of La Salle schools.

Accessible education

Available for purchase is a limited number of 11x17 inch prints on Fujifilm FBL Crystal Archive paper, mounted on acid-free backing with acid-free mylar paper covers.

For every P1,000 donation to the fund, donors receive a limited-edition note card collection (available in five different sets) featuring the exhibited photos. The sets come in specially designed metal packaging that resembles a box camera.

"The Green Light Project Note Card collection is the idea of alumnus Raimon Pessaño, a member of the university's centennial committee," said Oca.

All proceeds will go to One La Salle Scholarship Fund. The fund is managed by De La Salle Philippines, the umbrella organization that handles the network of schools run by the De La Salle Brothers of the Philippines.

"The network shares capital and intellectual resources to make Lasallian education more accessible and equitable," he said.

"Our founder, Saint Jean-Baptiste de La Salle, dedicated his life to educating the less fortunate. It's only proper that we remain faithful to his noble goal. At the core of these schools is the mission to provide an empowering Christian education. We seek to reach minds, touch hearts, and transform lives, and we want our Lasallian education to be accessible to more of our deserving but poor students."

DLSU was the first La Salle school in the country, founded in Paco, Manila, in 1911. It eventually moved to its current location in Malate, Manila. The network, with Bro. Edmundo Fernandez as president, now includes 11 schools in Luzon, three in the Visayas and three in Mindanao.

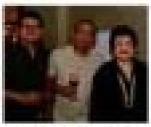

"The Green Light Project" will tour La Salle schools across the country, starting with The Museum at De La Salle University from January to March.
